One of the Pittsburg papers remarks: The managers of the East Liberty Railway Company, Pittsburg, have introduced a dummy engine upon their road, and for some days post has been testing its capacity and adaptability. On Monday the directors of the road gave it a public trial, and were, we understand, perfectly satisfied with it. This is the first engine which has been introduced upon our passenger railroads, and we hope, for the aske of the poor horses, that it will prove a

A NEW INVENTION WANTED -R. F. Stevers, of New York, in the Scientific American, al udes to a want which mechanical ingenuity i needed to supply. He says:

"If some one of your numerous readers will produce a simple and convenient device for raising and lowering the fire-grate in our common cooking ranges, he will confer a public favor, and find a ready sale for it. Range fires are praced some twelve to fitteen inches below the kettle bottoms, which at times is necessary for the purpose of heating the ovens and waterback. But it caily happens in the work of the kitchen that a sharp heat is wanted at the top of the range, and, although a sufficiency of coals may be burning on the grate, the dislance down is too great to make it effective. A new fire must be made, a bucket of coal used, and an hour's time required, which could be saved if the grate with its fire could be raised and lowered with pleasure. The invention should be made applicable to any and all ranges already in use. One-half the coal now used in my range could be saved by the use of such a device. Who will produce it?
